

Quilting in America

A presentation by MetroArtLinks

The history of quilting in America begins with English and Dutch colonial settlers. Join MetroArtLinks for a look at patterns of American quilts and the importance of quilting bees for women over the past two centuries. We will explore a variety of quilts, ranging from strictly practical bed coverings to colorful works of art that tell the stories of our country, families and lives.

Suzanne Scanlan and Allyson Sheckler are professors, art historians and the founding partners of MetroArtLinks, a collaborative venture designed to bring the art world to you.
